there has been no miracle says zhu at least in the sense of divine intervention he attributes the rapid economic growth in east asia to decades of hard work by people in the region though admittedly aided somewhat by favorable international and domestic conditions sound government policies and a few far sighted leaders

he begins by profiling countries in the order they emerged into the world spotlight japan south korea china and taiwan then he compares their economies concludes with a comprehensive explanation for the overall phenomenon and its internal variations in the new edition of this important contribution to understanding both the asian economic miracle and the 1997 8 crisis richard stubbs assesses the main explanations to date and updates the analysis to take account of globalization and the remarkable economic rise of china the demographic transition a change from high to low rates of mortality and fertility has been more dramatic in east asia during this century than in any other region or historical period by introducing demographic variables into an empirical model of economic growth this essay shows that this transition has contributed substantially to east asia s so called economic miracle the miracle occurred in part because east asia s demographic transition resulted in its working age population growing at a much faster pace than its dependent population during the period 1965 1990 thereby expanding the per capita productive capacity of east asian economies this effect was not inevitable rather it occurred because east asian countries had social economic and political institutions and policies that allowed them to realize the growth potential created by the transition the empirical analyses indicate that population growth has a purely transitional effect on economic growth this effect operates only when the dependent and working age populations are growing at different rates an important implication of these results is that future demographic change will tend to depress growth rates in east asia while it will promote more rapid economic growth in southeast and south asia from 1965 to 1990 the 23 east asian economies grew faster than all other regions of the world the high performing economies of japan south korea taiwan hong kong singapore thailand malaysia and indonesia experienced low and declining levels of income inequality as well the june 1997 financial crisis has challenged these economies many of the high performing economies have experienced serious problems including falls in currency and equity markets significant slowdowns in international trade and setbacks in economic growth emphasizing the role of government and the importance of managing development this book provides an overview of the major impact of the financial crisis on selected asian countries and of the development policies implemented examining the experience of managing economic development the book includes contributed chapters on china hong kong indonesia japan korea malaysia taiwan thailand singapore and southeast asia it will be a useful resource for scholars students and those researching asian economic development there is widespread agreement that the world's most successful developing countries in the 1980s were those in southeast Asia following in the footsteps of postwar Japan and more recently Korea. The populations of Thailand, Malaysia, Indonesia, Singapore, Hong Kong, and the Philippines have made enormous strides in income, industrial and agricultural production, exports, education, health, nutrition, consumption, and other development indicators. This book brings together political scientists, economists, officials of Asian governments, the United States, and representatives of the multilateral banks to analyze and explain Southeast Asia's extraordinary growth. Chapters and contributors to the Southeast Asian Economic Miracle include recent developments and future prospects of Indonesia by Anwar Nasution, the economic experience and prospects of Thailand by Sukhumbhand Paribatra, the development of the former Indochina states by Frederick Brown, trade and investment in Southeast Asian development by Stephen Parker, and managing renewable resources in Southeast Asia: the problem of deforestation by Gareth Porter. Among the critical questions that the contributors address are: Is the success of the 1980s and early 1990s a permanent part of the world's economic landscape? How will this region react to the growth of China's vast productive capacity and to the faltering of Japan's economy? What will be the effect of U.S. military disengagement caused by domestic budgetary concerns and the end of the Cold War? The Southeast Asian Economic Miracle is an important study of the shifting winds of the political economy of growth in our time. The movement away from a command to a free market environment will be an essential resource for political scientists, Asia area scholars, economists, and policymakers.

For students of international political economy, it is hard to ignore the growth dynamism and global impact of East Asia. Japan and China are two of the largest economies in the world in a region now accounting for almost 30 percent more trade than the United States, Canada, and Mexico combined. What explains this increasing wealth and burgeoning power? In his new text, Ming Wan illustrates the diverse ways that the domestic politics and policies of countries within East Asia affect the region's production, trade, exchange rates, and development, and are in turn affected by global market forces and international institutions. Unlike most other texts on East Asian political economy that are essentially comparisons of major individual countries, Wan effectively integrates key thematic issues and country-specific examples to present a comprehensive overview of East Asia's role in the world economy. The text first takes a comparative look at the region's economic systems and institutions to explore their evolution, a rich and complex story that looks beyond the response to Western pressures. Later chapters are organized around close examination of production, trade, finance, and monetary relations, while featuring extended discussion of China, Japan, South Korea, and taiwan wan is inclusive in his analysis with coverage including myanmar thailand laos vietnam cambodia malaysia singapore indonesia brunei and the philippines the text is richly illustrated with more than fifty tables figures and maps that present the latest economic and political data to help students better visualize trends and demographics each chapter ends with extensive lists of suggested readings economic development in asia explores factors that influence economic growth and development particularly from an asian development perspective grounded firmly on theoretical foundations it showcases the richness and variety of the asian development experience through extensive coverage of individual country case studies institutional developments and challenges facing policy makers in the region as well as in depth discussions of existing empirical evidence this book is specially tailored to meet the needs of social science students studying economic development in asia university students educators and government policy makers will find the book particularly useful for understanding growth and development trends in the context of a rapidly globalizing world with the rising tide of interest in asian economies the book will prove to be an invaluable for anyone seeking to better understand the process of growth and economic development in the region in studies in economic reform renowned and influential chinese scholar and politician siwei cheng outlines his theories for bringing economic reform to china in the context of the increasingly global economy this first volume of a two volume study concentrates on the geopolitical and economic transformation of asia pacific it focuses on the complex relationship between the decline of ideological bipolarity the rapid industrialization of east asia and the tensions generated by the shifting balance of regional and global economic interests annotation the impact of the june 1997 financial crisis on selected asian countries is surveyed with an emphasis on the role of government and the importance of managing development vol for 1963 includes section current australian serials a subject list this book is a comprehensive analysis of major elements of change in east asia which will have an impact on the political outlook and regional cooperation in economics and security by taking a close look at these substantive issues and elements the book will help readers to relate to the issues concerning the asean economic community such as the asean china free trade area fta as well as the fta between asean and japan it also examines other bilateral efforts currently undertaken by many east asian countries the book stresses the need not only for domestic restructuring but also for closer cooperation which will lead to greater sustainable and dynamic growth for regions of east asia based on papers from a workshop entitled economic aspects of demographic transition the experience of asian pacific countries in asia held at the acadenia sinica in taipei june 1998
